Wedgeworth

A HISTORY OF THE WEDGEWORTH FAMILY IN AMERICA

Thomas Wedgeworth is the first known Wedgeworth in America. It is believed that Thomas was born about 1712 in Cork County, Ireland, and that the Wedgeworths came originally from Wales and Scotland. Thomas married Rebecca Passmore in January 1741 in Harford County (now Baltimore), Maryland. Records at St. John's and St. George's parishes in Harford County also show the birth of Thomas and Rebecca's first child, a daughter, Elinore, born 12 October 1741. Their only other known child was a son, William, born in about 1742 in York County, Pennsylvania. Nothing more can be found about Thomas and Rebecca.

Elinore Wedgeworth married Thomas Finney Boyce, who was probably from Virginia, as he owned land in Halifax County, Virginia before moving to Abbeville, South Carolina. Thomas was in Abbeville as early as 1778 when he appears on a jury list there. He also served in the South Carolina militia as a private during the Revolutionary War. Thomas and Elinore both signed a land deed in 1787 in Laurens County, South Carolina. However, Elinore died sometime between signing the land deed in 1787 and the 1790 Census, where only Thomas and the children are listed. Thomas himself died 24 June 1792 in Laurens County, and in his will, he gives the care of his two daughters to Peggy Durham and his three sons to the care of their uncle, Elinore's brother William Wedgeworth. One of the boys, James, is mentioned in William's will as "James, an Orphan child living with me" and William leaves the boy some money for his schooling.

William Wedgeworth was born about 1742 in York County, Pennsylvania. There is a record of William's service with the York County militia and he is listed on a York County tax list. William came to the Abbeville, South Carolina area by 1777 (his daughter Jane states on the 1850 Alabama Census that she was born in South Carolina in 1777). William married Esther Mathews about 1770 in Pennsylvania. Esther was the daughter of Victor and Isabell Mathews. The only known signature of William is on the will of Victor Mathews, where William was a witness. Four of William's sons were born in York County, Pennsylvania, while Jane and the youngest son (John) were born in Abbeville. William served as a private during the Revolutionary War in the South Carolina militia. Several of his descendants have joined the D.A.R. based on William's military service during the Revolution.

The exact location of William's land in Abbeville, South Carolina is not known. But we can get a pretty good idea of where it might have been through an 1785 document which orders William and others who lived within six miles of Long Cane Road in Abbeville County to spend the day helping to maintain the road, which was the custom of the time. William is said to be buried in the Greenville Presbyterian Church Cemetery which is located near present-day Donalds, South Carolina. This church has a long history in the Abbeville area, and the present church building is on the original site. Because William is buried in an unmarked grave, it can not be proven that he is buried in this cemetery. In 1954 the members of Greenville Church erected in the cemetery grounds a monument honoring the over 50 Revolutionary War veterans who are known to be buried there. Unfortunately, William's name is not listed on this memorial. William died in 1798 in Abbeville, South Carolina. His will dated 27 April 1798 mentions his wife, Esther, and his five sons (James, William, Junior, Richard, Joseph and John) and his daughter Jane.

Wedgeworth Family

It is from these six children that all Wedgeworths have descended. After William's death, the family stayed on the lands in Abbeville, where they are listed on the 1790, 1800 1810 and 1820 Census. William also owned some land on the Salt Catcher River in Barnwell County, South Carolina but no documents have been found on this holding. During the 1820's when the former Indian lands of Alabama were opened to settlement, the Wedgeworth families joined the many other pioneers travelling the Federal Road from Augusta, Georgia to western Alabama. Reports during this time from the Greenville Church and other Abbeville churches all state a great loss of church members to the frontier lands. By the 1830 Census, only William, Junior was still in Abbeville, the other Wedgeworth families having moved to Greene and Perry Counties in Alabama. However, soon William too removed to Alabama, leaving no Wedgeworths in South Carolina until modern times.

The widow Esther Wedgeworth went with her adult children and their families to Alabama. She died in September 1832 in Greene County, Alabama and is buried in the Mount Zion Presbyterian Church Cemetery in Greene (now Hale) County, along with her youngest son John, who died in 1824. John is said to have been a Presbyterian minister and helped to establish the Mount Zion church where he is buried. This cemetery is commonly called the Wedgeworth cemetery. It is on former Wedgeworth land and is the final resting place of many Wedgeworths and their relatives. The cemetery can still be visited near Akron and Wedgeworth, Hale County, Alabama. The town of Wedgeworth was named after a later-day postmaster, William M. Wedgeworth, but this section of the county, near Black Warrior River, had originally been the site of the Wedgeworth plantations since the 1820's. Eight Wedgeworth families lived in that area during the 1830's. By the 1840's, Wedgeworth families were living in Greene, Perry, Fayette and Marshall Counties in Alabama and in Neshoba County, Mississippi.

The first Wedgeworth to have come to Alabama was probably Jane Wedgeworth Anderson, who came with her husband Thomas J. Anderson from Abbeville, South Carolina to Greene County, Alabama as early as 1819. The older Anderson children were born in South Carolina, but her son Thomas was born in Greene County in 1819. Jane's husband died in 1827, and from then on Jane and her children can be found living with her older brothers in Greene County. By 1850, Jane was living with her son Thomas, a physician, and his family until her death in 1859. She is buried in the Mount Zion Cemetery.

The 1850 Census finds Wedgeworths living in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and Texas. During the Civil War (1861-1865), many Wedgeworth men served the Confederate states in either the state militias or the regular state regiments of cavalry or infantry. Some died in battle. Most came back from their military service to resume their occupations as before: farmers, doctors, teachers, etc. Several Wedgeworth families moved after the Civil War to Louisiana and Texas. By the end of the 19th Century, Wedgeworths had settled in Arkansas, Arizona and California. As we near the 21st Century, Wedgeworth families can be found in almost all of the United States. Those who carry the Wedgeworth name carry it proudly as it reflects 250 years of Wedgeworths in America.
